Dr. Alma Littles was named interim dean of the Florida State University College of Medicine in February 2023. Dr. Littles has served as senior associate dean for medical education and academic affairs since 2003. As the Chief Academic Officer, she has led the college's accreditation efforts, the development and evolution of its curriculum and the expansion of its community-based education model, which differs from the vast majority of medical schools. After joining the faculty in 2001, she became the founding chair of the Department of Family Medicine and Rural Health.
